I generally don’t like pop out maps as I find they are too fragile. I didn’t work this map too hard, so not sure how well it would hold up for a week of touring. However, I used if for a few days and it held up fine. There was enough detail for about 90% of what I did. Some streets in Beijing don’t match the map, and google maps is inaccurate. Thats’ just as well, as once you’re in the country google is blocked anyway. I needed did find a good solution for high resolution maps of the city, and street signs are.. sparse.

these maps are terrific. And increasingly difficult to find. Three separate maps taking wider circles out from the Forbidden City. And the subway map and street index. Well laminated and indeed pocket size. Only down side is there is not date of publication. But then how much would the Forbidden City change year to year eh? Can only find a Popout Map for Shanghai. Wish other major tourist cities in China were covered too.

This version (Beijing) is GOOD, not as good as Tokyo or Istanbul, but very worth the money.I love these maps, perfect for travelers as they are small, fit in your back pocket and have everything you need for the city.The best part about these maps are not being that guy standing in the middle of a huge public area trying to read a 24' by 36" regular size map and looking just stupid. These maps allow you to quickly reference where you are without drawing attention to yourself.

Everyone on my tour wanted one, except the tour guide. He said you needed neighborhood detail because we were more often outside the center of Beijing.

This map was so helpful. The subway map needs to be updated, as some new routes are not included. For anybody touring Beijing, I recommend this product. Takes up little room but has a wealth of info. HOWEVER, they need to update the subway map.

Handy guide... informative, good map illustrations and perfect pocket size. Always love the pop out pocket maps when traveling.

If you need lots of detail with a larger area included, go with the China Regional Map by Periplus. This map however is fantastic for tossing in a backpack or even a pocket. It is very compact and very useful.

my students like it!
