Customer Reviews

Not liking the new Lonely Planet after the re-design/structure. It's so hard to find the information I need quickly and I couldn't find it that easily. It used to be much easier to find information like public transportation/estimated time between towns, estimated cost, etc. LP need to highlight those information more clearly, and use better organization of information rather than mashing the information all together in the paragraphs and hoping the reader to do a homework and highlight the essential info before they hit the road. I think LP wants to appeal more to travelers with mid to higher range budget. My travel budget tends to be mid range and I dislike the new change. If I'm spending my money on mid and higher range hotels and restaurants, I rather look at reviews on Trip Adviser than relying on LP writer's subjective opinion. What all travers need is the more detailed information on transportation, direction to touristic attraction, estimated travel times, costs and all that. After using the Bolivia, Peru and Cuba LP books after the re-design, I'm convinced to use travel books from different company. In my recent trip to Bolivia/Peru there are so many times I chose to hop on taxi than asking around and figuring out the direction/public transportation to places on my own, because either there is no such info on LP or I didn't have time to read the whole chapter to find the right info. I miss old versions!

I used one of these some years back when I went to Bolivia, so I bought the latest edition for my nephew, who will be doing a college-Term there in January. I expect he will find it as helpful as I did.

Very informative.

As expected
