Robert P. Doyle is the executive director of the Illinois Library Association. He is a noted authority and frequent speaker on First Amendment rights and the freedom to read. Under his leadership, the association has successfully opposed numerous legislative challenges to intellectual freedom. Prior to joining ILA, Doyle was director of the American Library Association's International Relations Office. Currently, he serves as vice-president of the Freedom to Read Foundation and is a recipient of their 2009 Roll of Honor Award. He has edited Banned Books since 1983. He holds a Bachelor of Arts from the University of Notre Dame, and a Masters in Library Science from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. He was born and raised in Milwaukee, and is a long-time resident of Chicago.

This is an in-depth look at book banning through the ages, concentrating on English-language works in the US since about 1920. The audience is primarily librarians and library supporters, but because of the extensive First Amendment coverage it is useful to anyone interested in civil liberties. The bulk of the book is a listing of 1,890 books that have been challenged at one time or another, giving for each a brief history of when and why it was challenged, along with some publication history and a list of notable awards won by the book. There is also about 85 pages of front matter with valuable information, such as summaries of notable First Amendment court cases (the freedom to read is guaranteed in the US by the First Amendment to the Constitution). This 2014 edition is a modest update of the previous 2010 edition, adding some court cases, newly-challenged books, and new challenges for previously-listed books. If you have the previous edition you probably don't need this one, unless you want to be totally up-to-date.
